It's that time of the year again, the time when the city is brimming with new Zealand gold, jewel and coin lovers. Come February 27 to March 5, 2016, an exciting event, The New Zealand Gold and Jewellery Show (NZGAS 2016), will be held at the Auckland Expo. The event was set up to facilitate education, enable buyers and sellers to make smart decisions and enjoy one of the largest shows in New Zealand. This is the biggest stage for the jewellery industry in the Pacific, while recognising the business challenges of the booming industry in the region. p0, err = BytePtrFromString(path) if err != nil { return } _, _, e1 := Syscall6(SYS_UTIMENSAT, uintptr(dirfd), uintptr(unsafe.Pointer(_p0)), uintptr(unsafe.Pointer(times)), uintptr(flags), 0, 0) if e1 != 0 { err = errnoErr(e1) } return } Alterations in collagen turnover in the hyperplastic prostate of the testosterone-treated rat. The alterations in collagen metabolism in the hyperplastic prostate (HP) of testosterone-treated rats were studied using histochemical and biochemical methods. Light microscopic studies showed no significant difference in the total area and thickness of the epithelium in the HP, the external prostatic stroma, and the internal prostatic stroma. On the other hand, total areas and thicknesses of collagen in the external prostatic stroma and in the internal prostatic stroma were increased by 10- and 3-fold, respectively, in the testosterone-treated group. Light microscopic studies showed the presence of active and quiescent stromal cells. Studies of the turnover of the internal prostatic stroma showed no significant differences in the stromal cell count and thymidine labeling index between the two groups. However, light microscopic studies showed the presence of active and quiescent epithelial cells in the HP. The ratio of the active to quiescent epithelial cells was significantly lower in the testosterone-treated group. The collagen concentration
