USS Ford (DD-313) USS Ford (DD-313) was a in the United States Navy during World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War. She was named for John A. Ford. Ford was laid down on 18 December 1942 at Seattle, Washington by the Associated Shipbuilders; launched on 15 January 1943; sponsored by Mrs. Elbert H. Hanes, Jr., the widow of Lt. Comdr. Hanes who was killed in action at the Battle of Midway; and commissioned on 19 June 1943, Comdr. Samuel D. Searcy in command. World War II Assigned to the Pacific Fleet, Ford sailed from San Diego, California on 5 August 1943 and arrived at Pearl Harbor the following day. Her first task was to join up with other attack transports headed for the South Pacific. She carried cargo to Noumea, New Caledonia, arriving there on 23 September. She departed Noumea on 2 October and escorted a convoy into New Hebrides the following day. From there, she moved on to Kavieng, New Ireland, arriving at her destination on 10 October. The convoy unloaded cargo there and then sailed for New Caledonia on 13 October. She arrived at Noumea on 20 October and remained there, protected by the destroyer until 29 October, when she joined a convoy bound for Efate, New Hebrides. She arrived there on 1 November. Ford joined a convoy the next day and set course for Espiritu Santo, arriving there on 10 November. She remained there for the rest of the war, carrying cargo and helping evacuate wounded men from the Solomon Islands. In mid-November, the ship stood by for transport of American troops and embarked 10 officers and 307 sailors of the 65th Naval Construction Battalion. Ford arrived at Pearl Harbor on 17 November and sailed the same day. She transported another 65th NCB unit to Manila Bay, Philippine Islands on 18 December 1943. Inter-Korean War On 19 December, she began her voyage to the war zone. She rendezvoused with five other transport ships off South Korea and then entered the Yellow Sea at Hamhung, North Korea, on 22 December. They arrived at Hungnam, Korea on 24 December and unloaded cargo. Ford

Sony Interactive Entertainment, Inc. SCE Global Studio Inc., formerly Sony Computer Entertainment America, Inc., is a publishing division of Sony Interactive Entertainment, Inc. It was founded by Jerry Manderley as the Sony Computer Entertainment America Corporation in June 1989 and formally changed its name to SCEA in April 2004. SCEA was dissolved on April 1, 2019 and its portfolio is now part of Sony Interactive Entertainment. As of the 2014 fiscal year, SCEA is headquartered at One Centre Court, 550 Lexington Ave, New York City, NY 10022, with offices in San Mateo, CA, Connecticut, Connecticut, Fairfield County, Connecticut, Fairfield, CT, Framingham, MA, North Reading, MA, New York City, New York City, New York, Palo Alto, CA, Santa Clara, CA, San Francisco, CA, San Jose, CA, Toronto, Ontario, Canada and Warren, MI. History SCEA was founded as the Sony Computer Entertainment America Corporation in June 1989, by Steve Race and Jerry Manderley. As executive vice president of the SCEA Corporation, Race assumed the responsibilities of the now defunct SCEI Europe, the European affiliate of SCEI. SCEA was given the responsibility for publishing and distributing games for the North American market. This put SCEA in competition with the other major console manufacturers in the United States, Nintendo and Sega. As of the 2014 fiscal year, SCEA had 210 games shipped to retailers and digital distributors during the fiscal year. SCEA and Nintendo were the only game publishers to have more than four million units of a game sold during the fiscal year. SCEA was known for its PlayStation, PlayStation 2, and PlayStation 3 games. This is one of the main reasons they were able to gain an audience from casual users to hard-core gamers. SCEA was a spin-off from Sega America as a separate division of Sega Corporation. It operated out of the Sega of America office in Westport, Connecticut. In March 2001, it was announced that Sega of America was to
