Dowload Da Apostila Mmi Casados Para Sempre Em Portugues .Neuronal calcium current dynamics and channel remodeling induced by sub-lethal dosing of pre- and postsynaptic neurotoxins. Although most sub-lethal doses of the class Ia, Ib and II/III glutamate receptor antagonists CNQX and Kynurenic acid have no significant effect on AMPA/Kainate receptor (AMPA) activity, a number of studies have demonstrated a prolonged, reversible inhibition of subsequent responses to AMPA/Kainate, mediated in part by an increase in GluR2-lacking Ca(2+)-permeable AMPARs. Hence, these studies used in vivo recordings of long-lasting, early onset AMPAR responses in rat visual cortex to characterize whether CNQX and Kynurenic acid modulate a component of normal 'tonic' AMPAR activity. Single cell recordings from single layer V cortical neurons were performed using glass pipettes containing CNQX, Kynurenic acid or ACSF in series with a one-way junctional extracellular recording pipette. Cells were hyperpolarized to -70 mV and AMPAR-mediated EPSPs were evoked by electrical stimulation of the optic chiasm. CNQX (50 nM) or Kynurenic acid (50 μ M) had no acute effect on the AMPAR responses. However, following a 30 min dosing regime, a significant increase in evoked AMPAR currents was observed and maintained following washout. Cells which received only CNQX, and not a dosing regime, exhibited a fast decay of the AMPAR response suggesting an increase in GluR2-lacking Ca(2+)-permeable AMPARs. These results suggest that sub-lethal concentrations of CNQX and Kynurenic acid induce AMPAR remodeling.
