Most Expensive Series Ever in November In a rare bit of good news, Friday's ratings for the season finale of CBS's NCIS: Los Angeles are currently a 2.0/7, up 3 percent from the show's premiere a week earlier. This makes it the first time in two years that the show has hit a two-digit number. NCIS still ranks as the number one show on TV among adults 18-49, as it has since the show's premiere (excluding midseason episodes).

Not only does the finale lead in in the hour, but NCIS also grows in the half hour in a big way, posting a 2.4/7 rating, which is the highest number for that half-hour in five years (since the 2012 season finale of NCIS: New Orleans). Elsewhere on Friday: – On ABC, the season finale of reality series The Bachelor (1.4/5) — which had the biggest single-night audience for a reality series since March 2012, per Nielsen live plus same day estimates — was flat in the hour, but down 8 percent from its series premiere on November 5th. – On Fox, the season finale of the comedy block Bob's Burgers (0.9/3) was steady in the demo, while Season 6 of Brooklyn Nine-Nine (1.5/4) was up slightly in the demo. – On the CW, the series finale of Jane the Virgin (0.5/1) fell 17 percent
