The picture illustrates how to fit Milviz to the generic CAD model. There are three major things to fix: the mainboard, the connector for the cooling unit and the yoke. Do you have any idea how I can solve this? Thank you in advance for any support. Thanks for all of your help. Best regards, Sebastian A: I don't think that is really the issue here... that just looks like a mess and the connector on the cooling unit is not connected. Q: ruby on rails best practice - create method I have a controller with a create method and a destroy method. I just can't find the right place to define these methods. it can be defined in the model class? or should it be defined in the controller? A: Create method and destroy method are common for controllers. The create and destroy methods are usually used for creating and destroying objects, so they should be defined inside your controller. But you can put these methods inside your model class as well. Here's a link to Ruby on Rails guide for Controllers and Models: not say that you were dead." "What?" "And that's why I'd like to apologize for all of the misery that I've caused you, most of all... your daughter." "It's true." "He's my father." "You're not in trouble, are you?" "I'm just a messenger, you know." "You're on your own." "I'm not gonna go to jail." "You're not gonna go to jail." "I'm sure he's still a pretty good lawyer." "I don't care." "I just want my life to be normal again." "I understand." "So, please, I just want to 2d92ce491b
