Ghost Rider (2007) Movie Sourced by Western Film The film is set in 2006, at a time when racing was undergoing a "rebirth". The first IndyCar season was won by Mike Alexander and Buddy Lazier (this was at the time before they became full-time drivers with Team KV Racing). In the movie, Riddick enters the newly established IndyCar series as a rookie, but he is soon outpaced by the veteran drivers. Riddick starts his own team, Team RA1, with the financial backing of the same entrepreneur that was behind the creation of the first IndyCar team, MWR. RA1 does not win any races, but he starts getting better in-between the races. The film focuses on the trouble he gets into, such as being arrested for speeding in the middle of a race and creating an incident at the Daytona road course. One of the highlights of the movie is the spectacular crash of Dario Franchitti at the same track. Franchitti was leading at the time, but his car caught fire, leading to an exciting race. Franchitti suffered a broken neck, and the movie features some footage of the race to show that it was quite close. The race scene is a car race "homage", with the main car and team cars being similar to those of Team RA1, and the livery in the movie is the same as that of the original RA1's car. Filming took place at the 2.4-mile, 14-turn Phoenix International Raceway. The movie was released on DVD in the USA on May 15, 2007. Box office Ghost Rider grossed $61.5 million in the United States and Canada and $98.1 million elsewhere for a worldwide total of $159.6 million, against a budget of $30 million. , the film has a 60% approval rating on Rotten Tomatoes.
