No registration is required!Q: Accessing an array in a class in a different.cpp file This is a big file so I will try to describe my problem as much as I can. I am making a game that makes use of high scores stored in an array. I have a game class that loads an array of structs called scores with objects of another class called Record. This is Record.cpp

Record::Record() { std::string key = "C:\\Users\\...\\AppData\\Local\\Temp\\scores.dat"; //Input file File input(key); //Initialize the file std::string line; std::ifstream ifs(key); std::vector recList; //Checks if the file exists and reads in the data if(!input.is_open()) { std::cout > key; iss >> value; record.key = key; record.value = value; if(record.key == "HIGHSCORES") { int a = atoi(value.c_str()); if(a > previous[0].value) previous[0].value = a;

recList.push_back(record); } } input.close(); ifs.close();
return recList; } //Constructor Record::Record(const
                std::string &
