- Each command is defined in wxWidgets-style, either as a unique hotkey (or window-numeric key code), or as a hotkey combined with a shortcut macro (defined by a pair of keystrokes). - A keybinding is defined as a key and a set of modifiers. The modifier names are the same as those used in the system; that is, the regular Xn but for n=modifier. - The modifier names are: None, Ctrl, Alt, Shift and Meta (the meta modifier is used only to build hotkeys that invoke the hotkey macro of a key). - Some modifier names are overridden by the modifiers used in the hotkey macro. - Hotkey Macros are defined as keystrokes only. - Hotkey Macros can be sequential, as in Notepad++, or consecutive, as in text editors. - Hotkey Macros are defined in the order they are listed in the configuration file (keymacro.txt). - A Keymacro is defined in wxWidgets-style, like key. - A keymacro can be declared as a standalone command, or as a command that is inserted in a hotkey macro. - The command is inserted in a hotkey macro, either as a command with the name keymacro or keymacrocmd, or as a normal command with the name keymacro. - When the hotkey macro is used, the commands inside are called in the order they are defined in the hotkey macro. - The commands inside the hotkey macro are called with the standard keymacro parameters. - The hotkey macro parameters are: - Key: The hotkey is defined using this parameter. - HotkeyCmd: The hotkey command or hotkey macro name used by the hotkey macro. - HotkeyTarget: The hotkey macro target. - HotkeyMacro: The hotkey macro. - HotkeyMacroStart: The index of the hotkey macro start. - HotkeyMacroEnd: The index of the hotkey macro end. - HotkeyTargetStart: The index of the hotkey macro target start. - HotkeyTargetEnd: The index of the hotkey macro target end. - HotkeyTargetLink: If the hotkey macro target is defined as a link, the link text is appended to the hotkey macro name. 77a5ca646e

Prerequisites: The required Perl module XML::XSLT is required to work. This is included with the XML::XSLT distribution. If you don't have this installed, it is available from CPAN. What it does: Wrap selected text around a given string. Expand abbreviations using a hotkey. If there is no selection, insert text into the current caret position Usage: Load the XSLT file from above to customize your script (use the full path to the file, including the file extension). @michael.bockver -- My web GUI is actually a little bit more complex, but the concept and logic is the same. WebEdit is a Notepad++ plugin that will take care of the text wrap/expand stuff. The only difference is that I also have a handy little widget in the status bar that shows the state of the Wrap/Expand operations at any given time. thanks. I will check it out. I have some old features I'd like to implement in my first web-based application. I'll take a look.Celebrity's claim an actor called him 'enemy of Islam' leads to death threat Do you know this man? Steve Evans An anonymous caller has made a claim that an actor calling him "an enemy of Islam" has led to a death threat. The actor was attempting to raise money for the charity Islamic Relief when he received a call on Friday in which a man said that he was responsible for an attack that had occurred in London earlier that week. Ahead of the London Marathon the man said "I am the man who killed your friend, and his family are going to pay for this", before hanging up. A spokesperson for Islamic Relief said: "The actor received a call to his mobile on Friday in which he was told he was responsible for the murder of a British man on the London Marathon route last week. "The actor is really shaken by this and has been left in extreme distress, fearing for his safety." A man has been arrested in connection with the incident, however police have not disclosed his full name or nationality. Police in London have said: "A man aged 45 was arrested by police in London on Friday. He was arrested at an address in an area of London on suspicion of the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism.
