We arrived in São Paulo late Sunday night after a long flight from Florida. Our arrival was after four hours of traffic on the way to the airport and more than a week of planning and organizing that lead to our final destination, the Brazilian Open of Beaches. Tomorrow marks the start of the soccer tournament. The short story is that after two losses at home in the group stage, our team is now in the Round of 16 in the Championship. It has become a really intense tournament in which the Brazilians and Portuguese teams have gotten more and more involved. When we arrived on Saturday evening at the Olympic Hotel, there was a very long check-in line. It was an old hotel but with a modernized aesthetic. It's situated on a beautiful, tree-lined stretch of Avenida das Nações Unidas in São Paulo. I like it. And it's centrally located for our players. After a couple of days in the hotel, we were preparing our gear for another long day tomorrow. Oh, and our first official training session starts tomorrow morning, so that's exciting too. I'm glad to be here and for our team. And I hope that we get to kick the Portugal game off tomorrow.
